League School for Autism is a private nonprofit school serving students with autism between the ages of 3 and 22. Established in 1966, the school employs a multidisciplinary model of autism education using the SCERTS™ Model, distinguishing itself from other autism schools that primarily use Applied Behavior Analysis.

PROBLEM

Although League School did not have specific issues with their previous copier/printer setup, they sought to reduce costs. An encounter with Revolution Office at the NAPSEC Conference led to an assessment of their existing contract, revealing potential substantial savings.

SOLUTION

Revolution Office conducted a comprehensive evaluation for League School's current copier/printer contract and proposed a cost-saving plan. Existing Toshiba copiers were replaced with a smaller fleet of more efficient Ricoh machines. Revolution Office introduced an automated toner replenishment program and committed to superior service guarantees, ensuring continuous and reliable support.

RESULT

By implementing Revolution Office's recommendations, League School reduced its copier fleet from six to five devices, resulting in a 37% cost saving, amounting to $37,000 over the five-year term. The school has since experienced no further problems, allowing staff to focus more on their mission without copier-related interruptions. Additionally, Revolution Office provided an unrestricted donation to support the League School, as done for all nonprofit customers.
